September 18-19, 2012

Seattle, WA

Catastrophe

A catastrophe can be defined as an incident whose occurrence interrupts the continuity of the status quo (steady state) on such a grand scale that no amount of effort, nor application of resources, will ever restore it.

Recovery from a catastrophe results in a “new normal” rather than a return to the status quo. A catastrophe causes significant irrecoverable loss in terms of impacts upon people, culture, language, the economy, the environment, health and physical welfare and the human psyche. A catastrophe creates loss of faith and hope among survivors in their traditional support systems such as the government, or the economy or belief systems.
